WOKY - Sp.

Mr. Robert Weissberg.

Sir:

While listening to the discussion on WOR, I called the station - (it took much effort to get through on their busy switch board) - and asked: "Are you receiving many protests about Mr. Weissberg's conduct"? The person answering my call said "We certainly do." I said "Well, add mine also, and let him know that nowhere and at no time have I ever heard a more impossible man".

You Sir, were a most horrible example of unrestrained rudeness, insulting boorishness, and also the most ridiculous contrariness.

In your egomaniacal insistence on interrupting Mr. Kiger's sincere efforts to answer and explain you did your side of the argument an ill service. A man who is secure in his convictions and judgment need not assault his opposition in the vicious way you did.

Thus, while you indulged in your childish tantrums you wasted valuable time, that you could have used to talk about the real issue on hand.

It is a sad symptom of our times that too many ill-mannered and confused people are allowed too loud a voice. I doubt that the few points that you made, convinced anyone that you are right, and the Warren Report is fallible. You certainly did not convince me.

(Mrs.) L. Kuehne.
